

I am asking that the FCC do not override the more rigid rules of the State of Indiana. Since I signed up for the No-Call List my evenings have been quiet and my answering machine has not been clogged up with useless messages.

The FCC should be making the rules more rigid, not less. I do not appreciate being placed on lists and these those lists sold and resold in order to be bothered and harassed by telemarketers.

Please look into making the rules and standards more rigid, as we have in Indiana, not less.
